"BLIND LOVE." Begin with the beginning. Remember that this story will be published EX-

CLUSIVELY in America in the NEW YORK SUNDAY WORLD. THE ROBBERS OF THE PEOPLE.

Since the organization of the Sugar Trust the retail price of sugar-a necessity of the people-has been raised 40 per cent.

The estimated profit of the Sugar Trust for the first five months of this year is $8,330.

What evidence, what rhetoric, what denunciation could be more damning than these figures ?

Is there no limit to the patience of the plundered people?

A highwayman is sent behind the bars for stealing a few dollars from an individual.

The Sugar Trust manipulators are pilfering the whole public of millions upon millions.

Their scheme is, to all intents and purposes, a gigantic robbery of the people, in defiance of the anti-conspiracy principles of the com-

THE CHILDREN'S CHARITY.

A very pleasing feature of the Free Doctors' Fund for the sick babies of the tenements is the widespread interest taken in it by the children of the metropolis. More than onehalf of the total number of contributors thus far have been boys and girls,

Nothing could be more appropriate than that the children of the well-to-do should thus reach out the hand of charity to succor and relieve the suffering children of the poor.

Ecous and Day Star collided five miles off Nar-ragansett this morning, and went ashore with their passengers on Gould Island. Both boats are badly damaged. The cook on the Ecous is badly hurt. The steamer Mount Hope, of Fail River, took the passengers off. Both boats are now being towed to Newport. The Ecous belongs to the Wickford line, con-necting with the railway route from New York to Newport.

necting with the railway route from New York to Newport.

The Edins had a large number of New York passengers on board, while the Day Star was loaded with excursionists.

The occupants of one boat did not see the other boat till the two came together with a terrible shock, and an instant later, as they separated, each vanished from the sight of the other in the fog.

The greatest excitement prevailed among the passengers on both boats and life preservers were rushed after in the greatest confusion.

The officers of both boats showed great coolness and presence of mind, and finally succeeded in quieting the passengers.

ness and presence of mind, and finally succeeded in quieting the passengers.

One or two of the Eolus's boats were smashed in the collision, leaving only sufficient boats to accommodate the ladies in case they should be forced to leave the steamer, and when an excited rush was made for the remaining boats the officers showed their authority with a coolness that could not but inspire confidence.

The Day Star is of the Continental line, and was en route to Providence.

Not a Half-Cent but Three Cents a Pound Tax on the Poor.

> The rapid and persistent advance in the price of refined sugar is being sorely felt by the poorer class of people, and the question being asked is, When will the Trust call a

When the Sugar Trust was formed in October, 1887, therk were loud cries made against it, because it proposed to advance the price of sugars about a half cent a pound. But despite the storm of popular jud gnation, prices were raised, and they have been going up higher and higher ever since. In the early Fall of 1887, before the Trust was organized, the average retail price of granulated sugar was about 7 cents a pound. Now it ranges all the way from 914 cents to 10 cents, a majority of retailers charging the latter price.

This unheard of advance is due not only to he machinations of the Trust, but to the action of the wholesale grocers as well. The representatives of the large wholesale

The representatives of the large wholesale houses met last Spring and concluded to charge a quarter of a cent additional over the refiner's prices for "handling," as they put it, they having declared that they were handling that staple at a loss.

"Why, it's downright robbery," said a retail grocer, who keeps himself well-informed of the doings of the Trust. "Here they are, piling up millions upon millions, and yet they keep right on putting the price up higher all the time.

"Take the statement in the weekly circular, for instance. It shows that in the first five months of this year the Sugar Trust made a total net profit of $8,230,000.

"Five dividends amounting to 10 per cent, were paid on Trust certificates in 1888, and thus far in 1889 a dividend of 2½ per cent, has been paid, with an extra stock dividend of 8 per cent.

"That certificates have become a favorite."

of 8 per cent.

"Trust certificates have become a favorite

Trust certificates have become a tavorite way to invest one's money because of the immense profit they yield.

"Of course people who invest their money this way don't care how the immense profits are gained; they do not stop to think that it is obtained by taking the bread from the months of the poor, or if they do they haven't got the heart to care."

got the heart to care."

The figures given by the retailers are correct. From $110, the quotation for certificates in March, the quotation has immed to $120, and conservative speculators admit that they would not be surprised if they went to $150 before the year is out.

These figures are merely given to show how heartless millionaires can combine and grasp the money of the poor people in defiance of the money of the poor people in defiance of all laws.

Of course the members of the Trust have an excuse for raising prices. They say that the advance in refined sugar is entirely due to the unprecedented advance in the price of raw material, and not due in any way to a conspiracy to raise prices.

It is known, however, that the Trust refineries have held a wast amount of raw augar for a long while.

Before the boom started the managers of the Trust saw what was coming, and they bought up all the raw material that they could lay their hands on.

'Suppose they did hold a lot of raw material?" said a sugar broker, this morning:
'they had the foresight to see what was coming, and merely protected themselves by buying in large lots. They are entitled to all they make, as it shows their business shrewdness."

The man with a large family to support who is working for $1.50 or $2 a day, how-ever, will doubtless disagree with the brok-er's ideas.

A fag estimate of the financial standing of the Sugar Trust is made in the Statistical, a weekly circular devoted to the sugar trade, in its latest issue. It says :

The names of the separate companies comprising the "Trust," and the capital stock is known by the syndence taken before the State Investigating Committee and from other sources.

This capital is limited to about $50,000,000, This entire amount was not paid to the stockholders of the refineries taken into the "Trust," but an amount remained in the treasury, 8 per cent, of which was given to certificate holders in April, and a small amount yet remains to be distributed.

Against this $50,000,000 certificates the "Trust" have fourteen working, besides five closed, refineries in New York and vicinity, Boston, New Orleans, St. Louis and San Francisco—say all the refineries in the United States except four in Philadelphia, one in Boston and one in San Francisco. in San Francisco.
The total value of these "Trust" refineries, with the improvements added since the "Trust" took possession, and independent of their earning value, should be at least $20,-

their earning value, should be at least $20,000,000.
From the business of the year 1888 the "Trust" have a surplus of nearly $10,000,000 cash, after payment of dividents, and from the business of 1889 to the present time they should have when liquidated, $13,000,000
net cash profit—say a total of $23,000,000 cash surplus, which, added to $20,000,000
money value of plants, gives a total of $43,000,000
money value of plants, gives a total of $43,000,000 or $100 assets.

A moderate estimate of profits for remainder of year would give them a total of $50,000,000, or $100 per certificate, even if the Trust should be liquidated at that time, which is not a supposable case. Years may probably clapse belore their business can be seriously interrupted, Sugar's Cost Again Raised by the Mighty Inspector Byrnes Tells Nellie Bly Some known a woman to do good detective work?" Remarkable Things.

> He Says There's a Female in Every Crime.

And that She's "the Finest Tag that Can Be Put on a Criminal's Shoulders."

There are very few persons in the world who haven't imagined they were especially fitted to fill one of three positions. If they did not want to be actors they longed to be writers, and if they did not want to be writers they hungered to be detectives. Do you not know among your acquaintances several who are positive that they possess great dramatic ability, which the world would recognize if they could only secure an opening? And don't you know several more who are positive they would startle the literary world by their genius if editors were not so mean and would only print their productions? And haven't you other acquaintances who could have solved the Whitechapel mystery and cleared up the Cronin case in twenty-four nours if they had only the chance?

I have known many such persons, and I think the less chance for an opening they get the greater happiness they have. I know one woman. short, fat, ngly, black, forty-five and gray. who imagines herself a second Charlotte Cushnan. Every Summer she in-erts an advertisement in the newspapers to the effect that " a eautiful, prepossessing young star, of great dramatic ability, wants a manager with $5,000; can make $20,000 in six months." And there s another woman who never reads of anything, from a bank roobers, or murder down to a lost pug dog, who does not think she could solve the invitery if some one would only recommend her o some detective bureau.

I decided to consult Inspector Byrnes, who has nore experience with would-be detectives than iny one else in New York, as to what chance there is on his torce for women.
"Tell me," I said, "have you many appli-ations from women who wish to become detec-

he rested his elbow on the desk and toyed with a penholder. "How do I get them? In person and by letter. The strangest part of it is that not one woman out of fifty is a New Yorker." What class of women are they?"

"That I cannot say positively. There are wo classes to which they do not belong-the very rich and the bad. They are always dressed well and seem educated. I think they are mostly women who live at some distance from New York, and who have nothing to do but read fictitions stories in which some wonderful female detective figures or police storics of some capture. and they dream over them until they become ossessed with the idea that they are cunning and they want a chance to show it."

Do they expect to make money by it?" "I don't think they do. They offer to work for nothing or anything, if I will only give them trial. They all think they have the natural intuition and ability to accomplish a great

WOMEN CANNOT KEEP SECRETS.

"Do you ever give any of them any work?" "I never do. I never want to offend the adies, of course," said the Inspector, as he idly twirled my parasol like a top, "so when they urge me to give them 'just one trial, now do, 'I always say there are reasons why I cannot. That's all you have to do, just touch a woman's curious chord and you get no peace until she is satisfied on that score. Women can't keep a secret. There was a clever woman in here the other day-a well-dressed, handsome womanand she said, 'Now, Inspector, why won't you employ a woman ? 'Because,' I told her, 'no woman with a husband or sweetheart can keep a 'Then I am just the one you want, 'she said, springing to her feet; 'my husband is dead and my heart is in the grave, "and the Inspector laughed heartily at the recollection. 'But that is true." he continued gravely no woman can keep a secret. If she has a ausband or sweetheart she wants to show how much she trusts him by sharing the secret. When I do employ a woman, if possible, I put her to work without telling her anything about the case, or if that is impossible, and she must be told. I always put some one on to shadow the woman while she is working. I never knew a woman I could trust in such affairs. We don't need women in this office. There never was a case in which it was positively necessary to have the aid of a woman, and yet we never have a ease that a woman does not figure in and help us to a very large extent."

"I don't understand," I said, as the Inspector watched to see the effect of his words. "You know the old saying that in every case there is a woman at the bottom of it? Well, if a woman isn't at the bottom of it she is always in it. The first thing we do when we want to find a criminal is to find the woman. We search out his wife or sweetheart and devote our attention to her. They are the finest tag that can be on a criminal's shoulders. Unknowingly they give us all the pointers for our work. There isn't a man who gets into trouble but has some woman he loves, and if he makes his escape, sure enough the longing to communicate with the one he loves is a thing he cannot conquer. In some way he sends her a message, and then we have him. If she's his wife she will stick to him till death and sacrifice everything to aid him. But her devotion only brings him nearer to the clutches of the law, for we know every move she makes. If she is his sweetheart she has tenderness enough in her to remember how he has cared for her and offers him the consolation he seeks, so in either case the woman unknowingly helps us capture our man.

BETHATING THEIR LOVERS. woman is a mill-stone around a thief's neck, "said the Inspector, "Why? Because he

"Well, now," he said, "I think it would be very difficult for a woman to be a good woman and be a professional detective. No good woman will pry into the domestic secrets of others to betray them. I think good women have a genic, sweet honesty that would prevent them from doing such things. Some of these private agencies are blots on the city. They watch the newsapers and when they see any notices of articles ost or stolen or persons missing, they write to the persons advertising that by calling upon them they can give some information. I got the two detectives, and found they were husband and wife, and had been working to keep the other couple apart so as to give them plenty of money. That is only one case. There are many Inspector Byrnes is a rather handsome, wellbuilt man. He is 5 feet 10 inches in height. and weighs 180 pounds. His closely-cut brown hair is slightly threaded with gray, and his drooping brown mustache fails to hide the everhappy and pleasing smile which aids the bluishgray frank eyes to cheat one into the idea that this man has never know or gazed on the misery and wickedness of the world.

Inspector Byrnes has for twenty-six years oeen tussling with crime and criminals. He began first as a policeman, "just because he thought it was nice to wear a blue uniform and orass buttons" and get the best of law-breakers, so he says. He was faithful and did good work, and one after another he mounted the rungs of the ladder, for in his business no position can be skipped for one in advance. Eleven years ago e became inspector.

work for. Littlewood has the 24-hour record (two days), at 164½ miles: 36 hours, 216½ tarted," said the Inspector, which means the business has not grown to be an old story to him. "I live in my business. I have no pleasures or vacations: I do not attend places of amisement. I attend to business during every moment of my waking hours, and when I am asleep I dream of it."

THE INSPECTOR'S BUSY LIKE.

Inspector Byrnes has lived at 59 West Ninth street since 1875. He has a pleasant wife and a pleasant wi ing and clever children. There is no son to bear the father's name. The Inspector will be forty-seven years old on June 15, but he looks much younger. Some of the Inspector's most interesting cases have found their way into print. Several years ago he compiled a book entitled "Professional Criminals of America." The book was the most complete thing of its kind ever published. It contained the photographs and history of most well-known criminals in America and has been the means of identifying many of them. After Inspector Byrnes sold the rights of his book to his publisher an effort was made to have a copy of "Professional Criminals of America" given to every American Consul. The Inspector says that American Consuls are frequently victimized by professional criminals, who happen to ized by professional criminals, who happen to be away from this country. In some way the novement tell through. Besides this book Mr. Byrnes, in connection with Mr. Julian Hawthorne, has published five books, among which are "The Great Bank Robbery, " " A Tragic Mystery, " " The American Penman" and "Another's Crime." The latest work, just published in scrial form, is Sergeant Von." a story of unique series of rimes committed in this country and Europe. This is solely Inspector Byrnes's work. "If one built a wall around New York," said the Inspector, when speaking about keeping trace of criminals, "one could know the city perfectly and be able to tight with what work came beneath one's nose, but if the search had to be made outside of the walls for an escaped criminal or an accomplice the searchers would be the worst jays one could well imagine. There is never a crime in any town or city that I do not take an interest in and work out mentally to see how, why and when the crime was committed. Thus I know what is going on, and if by any chance any part of the work should?fall on me I know immediately what to do, for I have studied the case until I know as much as if I had been working on the ground. People get the idea that detecting is an easy thing and that any one can do it; but in this, as in other walks in life, one must be able to conceive original ideas and be able to work them out. If they try to follow in the footsteeps of another they will fail just as sure as death. But it is a great ousiness and my heart is wrapped up in it," conluded the Inspector.

VEBY LITTLE CHANCE FOR EX-CONVICTS. Probably no man of the same income gives nore to charity than does. Inspector Byrnes. 1 suppose most beoble would think it was no charity to give aid to criminals, but criminals are the ones who receive aid from Byrnes's pocketbook. Why does he give them money? To help keep them out of jail as long as possible As he explained to me, after a thief has served his mercy for him. He is branded and no one wil mploy him. What is he to do? Steal, of course. So when Inspector Byrnes meets these men he

SIONER GILROY'S DEPARTMENT. The work of decapitation in the Department of Public Works goes merrily on, and as July 1 approaches the ardent hopes of many Tammany braves are realized. To-day Commissioner Gilroy accepted the resignation of Water Register John H. Cham-bers, and appointed Joseph B. Reilly to this berr, and appointed Joseph B. Reilly to this nice little $4,000 position.

Mr. Reilly is lucky in that he is a brother-in-law of Joseph J. O'Donohue and resides in Commissioner Gifroys Harlem District. He has been for a long time a Deputy Clerk of the City Court at a salary of $2,000.

Aniong other appointments made by Commissioner Gifroy to-day was William P. Mechan, of the Twenty-second District, as Superintendent of the Twenty-second District, as Superintendent of the pine-vard in Twenty-fourth street. In place of John Cloughen's salary was $2,000, from which $200 has been topped by Commissioner Gifroy. Gilroy.

John J. Sullivan and Joseph P. Kennedy have been appointed inspectors of water-meters, in place of Patrick H. Phillips and William J. O'Grady.
